

ABSTRACT

This invention provides an instrument for the measurement of supply chain performance and a method for evaluating such performance. The instrument includes 5 a plurality of items divided into three dimensions being the service effectiveness for shippers, the service effectiveness for consignees and the operations efficiency of the transport logistic providers. Use of the instrument allows a user to measure and identify areas for specific improvement in the supply chain from the perspective of the transport logistics provider.